LITHOPS

Water – Winter is the growing season of these succulents. They should be allowed to dry out completely between watering, even to the point of slightly shriveling. You may need to water as little as every 6-8 weeks. Lithops should be kept dryer in the summer when they are dormant.

Light – Lithops need bright light but not direct sun, which can cause burning. Outside, they need light shade and protection from freezes and excess moisture.

Fertilizer – A house plant fertilizer, at ½ strength, may be added 2-3 times a year during the growing season, but not near the end of the season.
